Mrs. Marsh

Mr. Longfellow, who had kindly undertaken to bear the cost of the copy of the Benjamin's Comment, writes to me that he sees nothing to change the contract. I therefore return the form, without alteration, with Mr. Bencini's signature.

I think the confronto very important," says Mr. Longfellow, and will pay the expense have asked you to send her my most respectful salutations.

I am, my dear Mrs. Marsh, I am very truly yours,
Prof. Nocton

And according to his generous wish
very truly yours
Prof. Nocton
