

Joe Cabaza and Darin MacLeod moved to Vermont from California to enjoy the benefits of Civil Union. Now living in Vergennes they wanted to do something special for the children of their community during this Halloween season. They constructed four foot high images out of plywood and recreated a scene from "It's A Great Pumpkin, Charlie Brown" on their front lawn. Their hope was to distract from the fears of the recent tragedies in the news and bring a smile to the faces of their "little" neighbors and their families ... and they did!
