Green Mountain Film Fest Features 3 Queer Movies
The sixth annual Green Mountain

Film Festival will be held this year March 21-30 in Montpelier. Among 27 of the very best American independent films, foreign films, documentaries and Vermont-made films will be the New England premiere of Vermont filmmaker John O'Brien's Nosey Parker, the third in his trilogy that includes Vermont Is For Lovers and Man With a Plan.

Of particular interest are three films co-sponsored by Mountain Pride Media. The Cockettes shows archival footage of the camp San Francisco performers in the late 1960's and early 1970's assembled with interviews with surviving members of the troupe. It won the Los Angeles Film Critics' Best Documentary award this year.

His Secret Life, directed by Ferzan Ozpetek (Steam) follows a happily married woman who learns, on her husband's death, that he's conducted an affair for years with a man. The film traces her reluctant involvement with the "other" man and his friends.

In Ruthie and Connie, two irrepressible women now in their 70s describe to documentary filmmaker Deborah Dickson how as typical housewives in Brooklyn in the 1950s they fell in love and risked everything to be together.
