

The Stars Are Out: Being With Sagittarius

Fall is nearly over and as the days shorten, we count on the lively and fiery energy of Sagittarius to brighten up our lives. Sagittarius is not only a fire sign, but being mutable, is fire in motion, a potential wildfire.

From Nov. 23 until Dec. 21 we all co-exist with the Archer, the traditional symbol for Sag. The Archer fires off an arrow and then sets out to find out where it went. This is a time when we may find ourselves wanting to go out there, seeking the arrow, seeking what is not in our immediate area of understanding. We want to understand. We want to know what it's all about – and so we must seek. It is a time when we want to expand on our knowledge.

Jupiter, the big one, is the star partner to Sagittarius, therefore we may experience the need to grow, learn and discover. The down side here could be a simple urge to be excessive about anything and everything. Once again, we choose.

Questions that might come up would be: "Do I want to travel? Do I want to go to school? Do I want to have an adventure? Do I want to go on a retreat? Do I want to eat this box of chocolates?"

Travel is not an imperative. Studying or reading about far away places or things foreign could be just as satisfying. Going back to school or simply learning something new will beckon us during this period. We may begin fantasizing about sailing trips or trekking in Nepal.

Our orientation may turn to things spiritual as bigger thoughts of "why and how" begin to tickle our consciousness. What about the god, the goddess, the Truth, the Answers? Or we might just as happily settle for the rush, the thrill – anything over the top. The present Jupitarian influence creates an atmosphere for all things large. It might look like generosity and magnanimity or pomp, arrogance and an inflated sense of self.

The Elk is a totem for Sagittarius in some Native American astrological thinking. The Elk, with its long legs and noble carriage, can help us to get beyond self-aggrandizement and ambition. We are now better able to dwell, like this great beast, in the beauty of the ordinary, keeping our heads up, nurturing our stamina and our striding strong for the long haul. ▼

Ever wonder where the Rubik's Cube really came from? Try Budapest! In 1974, a man named Erno Rubik invented the Cube. After winning the highest prize for outstanding inventions in Hungary, in 1980, the Cube won top toy awards in Britain, France, Germany, and the U.S., and quickly achieved a universal presence. Imagine how much money could be raised for Mountain Pride Media if supporters bought their toys, games, and puzzles through iGive.com, where up to 25% of every purchase is donated to Mountain Pride Media! Click the iGive link on the affiliates page at: www.mountainpridemedias.org, and you can shop at 240+ stores, including Toys R Us, USAOpoly.com, iHearthSong, and Amazon.com.
