Recruiting Participants for Research Project University of Vermont Research Study Coping with HIV and AIDS

The University of Vermont's Department of Psychology is conducting a study on coping with HIV and AIDS. The study is supported by the National Institute of Mental Health. We are interested in finding out about the ways in which individuals with HIV and AIDS cope with the stigma of HIV and AIDS. We are currently recruiting adult men and women with HIV and AIDS to participate in the study.

Participants will be compensated $50, reimbursed for travel expenses and paid for the distance they travel at a rate of $12.50 for every 50 miles of travel. In the event you are unable to travel to the UVM project site, arrangements can be made to accommodate you.

The confidentiality of all communications associated with the study will be maintained to the maximum extent allowable by law.

To learn more about the study or if you are interested in participating in the project kindly call 1-866-532-7183. This is a confidential toll-free telephone line.
