

Johnson, Vt.

Sunday Afternoon.

Dear Ones at Home.-

I have just got home from church and do not mean to let another hour pass before I have a letter ready to send out to you tomorrow. Altho I have a wretched head-ache, and it does not seem as though I could write, but feel it is my duty. I often wonder when I sit down to write to you, if my letters are as welcome as the ones I receive from home. It does revive me to hear from you all. I have so many things to write, you see I won't confine myself to common note-paper.

Mr. & Mrs. A. gave us the liberty to invite in gentlemen friends, providing we could easily obtain Prof's permission for last evening.

Prof. was willing so we invited in six, Twelve of us you see made a very select company. Everything passed off grandly and the boys declared they had had a tip-top time - never had a better. All had been out in society a good deal, knew how to appear,
