My dear Mr. March

Many thanks for your kind answers to my troublesome inquiries.

Mr Kirkup, whom I saw yesterday, told me that it was Prof d'Ancona of Pisa who was at work, or proposed to set himself at work on Dr Paul's treatise. But I suspect that the old Baron had turned an expression of interest into an intention of translation. The poor old man was greatly animated in showing me the pencil head of Dante the autograph of his name, which
