

Yes! In Deed We Did It

Commonwomom and the Howl project (Vermont Women's Land Trust) are thrilled to announce the purchase of 50 acres of land, a house and barn in Huntington, Vermont. This purchase, preceded by four years of planning and fundraising by a large and dedicated group of Howlers, will be followed in 1989 by an additional purchase of 45-60 acres.

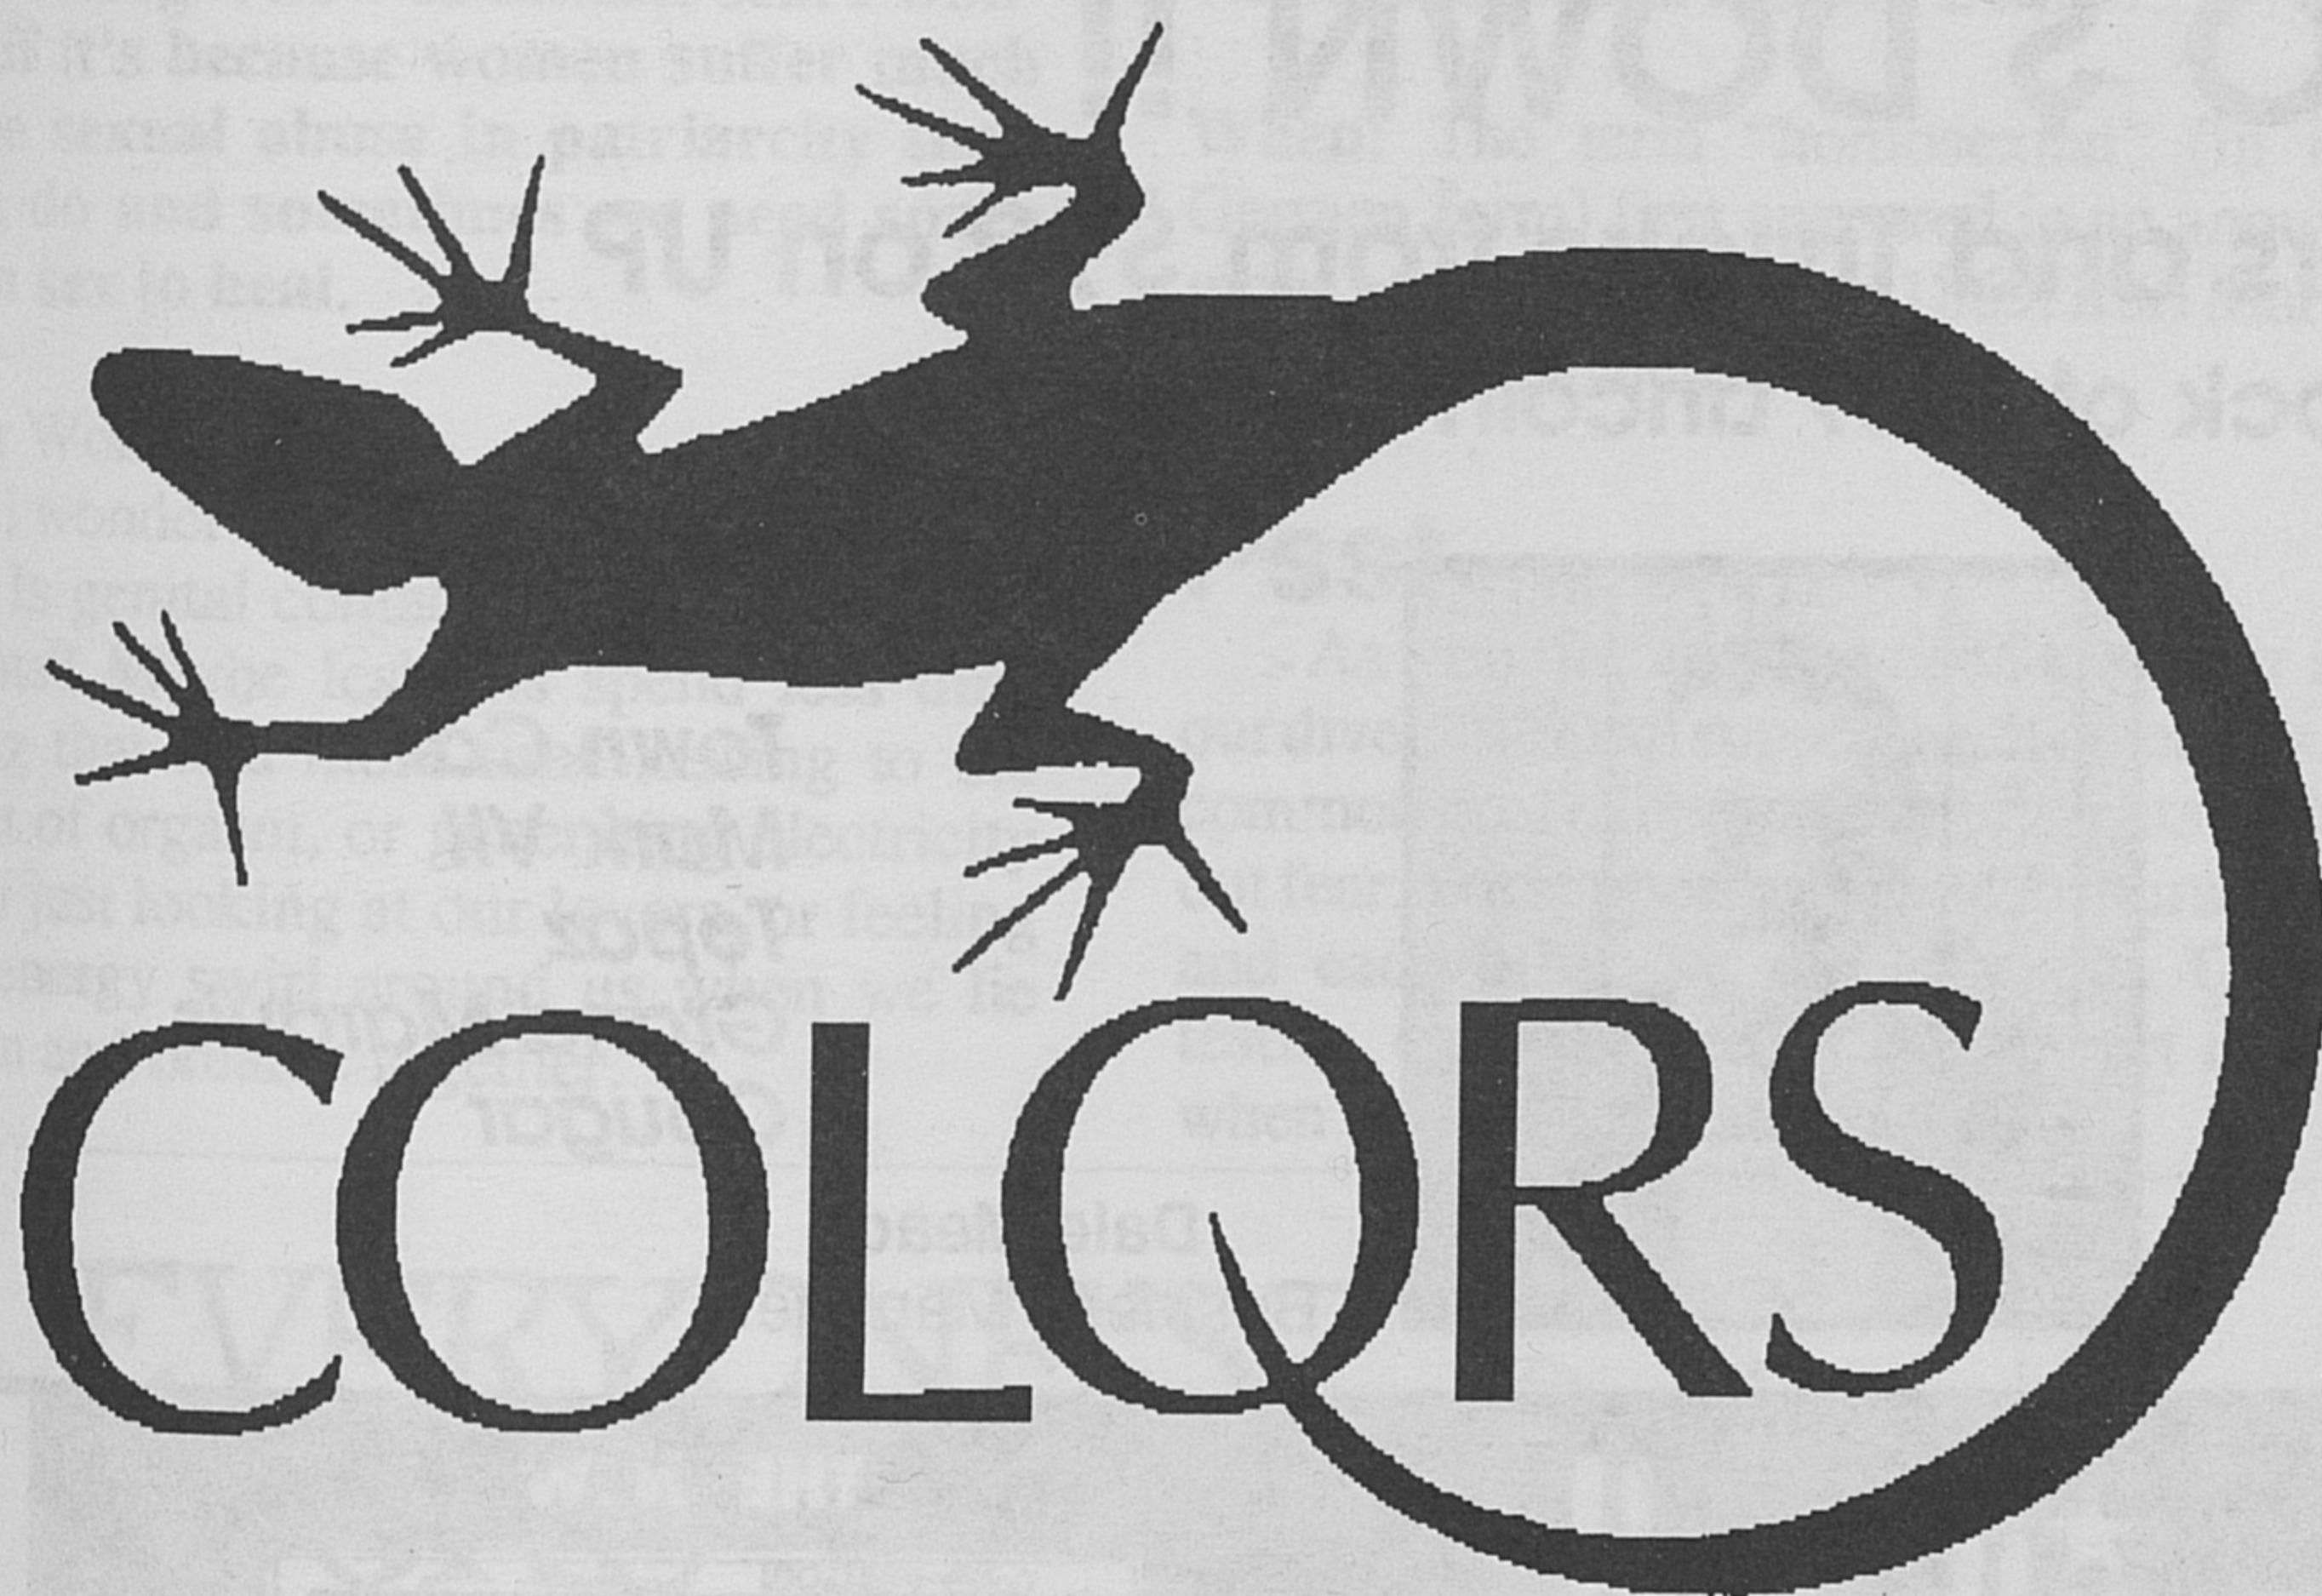

Many thanks to some very generous local contributors, and to the hundreds of national and international donators. HOWL will be issuing a newsletter this winter with visions, plans, projects, calendar, etc. For more information on HOWL, which will be open for primitive camping in 1989, contact HOWL, P.O. Box 242 Winooski, VT 05404.

ourselves better, and in the events of our daily lives as we interact with others, reclaiming our rights will be achieved by each of us as we refuse to accept anything different from what we are. Naming ourselves realistically is an essential step to political power.
