and flyers. The group held a drag ball and took a field trip to the AIDS quilt memorial, as well as distributing ribbons for World AIDS day.

The GSA co-sponsored a welcoming reception for new students in the fall with activities centering around acceptance events. In the future they hope to bring more speakers to campus, and assist in planning a benefit concert by Noel and Yolanda on October 17.

For additional information contact Trish Turnerseadlea. She is the advisor of the GSA and the director of student activities at Lyndon State. Her e-mail address is seadalet@mail.lsc.vsc.edu. Her phone is (802)626-6344

Marlboro College:

"GLBT & F organization" sponsors activities such as outings and dances throughout the academic year. They are an informal bunch, but nonetheless five to ten students are actively involved." Carolyn Conrad, a contact person for GLBT & F says "their goal is to connect new students to the community and show them that there is support and guidance available."

According to Conrad, Marlboro College has a "very accepting student body and community as a whole towards GLBT issues. On September 3, the GLBT & F organization will have a table at the Marlboro activities fair.

For more information contact Carolyn Conrad at cconrad@marlboro.edu or Jenny Karstad through admissions.

Middlebury College:

The Middlebury Open Queer Alliance (MOQA) is very active at Middlebury. MOQA's approximately twenty active members meet weekly at 8 PM in the Chellis house. These meetings are open to anyone and are confidential. Many parties and social events are also apart of the calendar.

MOQA sponsors lectures and dinners that are academically oriented, especially during national coming out week in October and gay/lesbian history month in April. They held a retreat on Middlebury's Broadleaf campus last September and eight area schools attended.

In addition, MOQA is excited to announce that a gender studies academic interest house has been approved for Middlebury's campus. Stephanie Hunt, the mistress of publicity and co-convenor of MOQA, said, "the gender studies house will focus on peer training and mentorship and queer/gender/gay & lesbian studies, hosting a faculty dinner/discussion series, a reading discussion group (in which people read an article or a short work of fiction or non fiction and meet once every couple of weeks to discuss the reading), and a number of co-sponsored events with academic departments and other campus groups."

More information about the Middlebury group is available at www.middlebury.edu/~moqa

Saint Michael's College:

An Ally group is available on Saint Mike's campus. Linda Hollingdale, a contact for SMC's GLBT support group, explains that Ally is "a student group that is under the umbrella of the Student Association. It is funded by the SA and works throughout the year to offer support to GLBT students and their allies. The group sponsors workshops, training programs, speakers, and educational projects.

The GLBT support groups is also available, however, it's for GLBT students only. Lina Hollingdale and Laura Crain can be contacted for further information. Hollingdale can be reached at (802)654-2546 and Cain can be reached at lcrain@smcvt.edu.

SMC's counseling web page maintains "resources for GLBT students and their allies to look up in pursuit of more information," Hollingdale explains. The site is at www.stmvt.edu

Trinity College:

The GLBA at Trinity was started a couple of years ago. Although the organization participates in activities together, there are separate meetings for the allies and the alliance. Due to homophobic outbursts on campus, there became a need for two separate groups. The ally group has twenty to thirty member and the alliance maintains six to fifteen. The gay, lesbian, bisexual alliance has displayed posters concerning gay rights in the past, provided informative speakers and panel discussions, attended Visibility

Day in Montpelier, and held outreach activities for first year students in September.

University of Vermont:

Free to be: GLBT Alliance is advised by Jackie Weinstock. The organization holds weekly meetings on Thursdays at 7:30p in Billings student center (656-0699) and hosts a potluck dinner for GLBT students, faculty, and allies during the fall and the Spring.

"A Room of Our Own" is another program for GLBT students on UVM's campus. It is located in the Living and Learning Center. Anita Lang and Jackie Weinstock are the advisors of the organization and Kerri McAllister is the program director of the suite.

UVM offers courses in sexual identities as well. In order to take "Sexual Identities," a student must be at least a sophomore and to take the advanced seminar in Sexual Identities one must be a junior or senior.

For additional information Jackie Weinstock can be reached via phone at (802)656-2058

Vermont Law School:

The Vermont law school as a GLBT alliance but no information was available about it at press time.
